What's Love Got to Do With It?

"...the kind of love that God instituted and demonstrated is a costly one because it involves sacrifice and presence. It's a love that operates more like a sign language than spoken outright." ~ Bob Goff

"Jesus replied: 'Love the Lord God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind. This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like it: 'Love your neighbor as yourself.' ~ Matthew 22: 37-39

Lutheran education is more than the mere imparting of knowledge. It is about shaping hearts and minds with the love of Christ, a love that calls us to live not only in relationship with God but also in compassion and kindness towards one another. In a world that often seems divided and fractured, Christian education provides a unique opportunity to cultivate a deeper understanding of what it means to love—both in faith and in action.

In our classrooms, this love can present itself in the way we treat each other, the respect we show, and the encouragement we offer. Our teachers and students alike are called to create an environment where love is the foundation of every interaction. It's through love that we find unity, and it's through love that we truly grow.

In our Lutheran schools we are not just seeking academic excellence, but spiritual maturity. We are learning to love as Christ loves—sacrificially, unconditionally, and with a heart that desires to serve others. This kind of love does not always come easily, but it is the love that transforms lives. It is the love that teaches us to forgive, to show patience, to be kind, and to offer grace, not because we are perfect, but because Christ first loved us.

We are also empowered to be beacons of love in our communities, sharing the light of Christ with those around us. Whether in a classroom, in our homes, in the workplace or in our neighborhoods,,

More about the movie:

Are you watching young people immersed in their screens — scrolling through social media, playing video games, and losing focus with ever-decreasing attention spans?

Physician and filmmaker Delaney Ruston faced this challenge with her own kids and screens. She questioned how this was affecting family dynamics, education, and the mental well-being of young people.

Screenagers: Growing Up in the Digital Age takes a deeply personal and relatable approach. Delaney opens the doors to her own family life and meets with others to explore the messy struggles over social media, video games, academics, and internet addiction.

Through poignant and unexpectedly humorous stories, paired with surprising insights from leading experts, Screenagers: Growing Up in the Digital Age reveals how screens are shaping kids' development. Most importantly, it offers actionable solutions to help adults empower kids to navigate the digital age and find balance.
